Reflection: -

Festivals often involve music, dancing, and vibrant decoration. The Ganesh Chaturthi Festival was celebrated at Royal College of Education and Research for Women with great enthusiasm and fervor as festivals like these bring people everyone closer, spread happiness and remind us of the importance of unity and love. The Celebration began with the lightening of the lamp signifying the light of the knowledge dispelling the darkness of the ignorance. After the lamp-lightening ceremony, there was a Paper Reading highlighting the importance and significance of the festival followed by another paper reading educating about the eco-friendly practices that can be adopted in the celebration of Ganesh Chaturthi. The programme proceeded with a signing performance and an electrifying dance performance. The Programme ended with the Principal's address.

Outcomes Achieved:

The celebration helped in creating the awareness regarding the cultural significance of the festival alongside educating about the eco-friendly ways and practices through which such festivals can be celebrated without harming the environment. The programme successfully brought together a display of different art forms and skills also facilitating the team work and cultural cohesiveness. Students also got the firsthand experience in organizing such cultural event successfully.

Feedback of the students:
