Introduction:

The Department of Lifelong Learning and Extension (DLLE), University of Mumbai, aims to sensitize students towards social responsibility through community outreach and skill development initiatives. Royal College of Education and Research for Women always stand at the forefront when it comes to Community Service and Community uplifting. It has been enrolling all the students for the Extension Project since 4 years. In keeping up with this commitment, college undertook the DLLE project titled 'Skill Development' For the academic year 2024–2025, This project aims to empower students and community members by enhancing practical skills while also bridging the gap between academia and society.

Orientation Program:

The DLLE Cell of the college began its extension project by successfully enrolling all the students of F.Y.B.Ed. and S.Y.B.Ed. into the DLLE Program by the University of Mumbai. The registration fees for the same was paid by the Management of the Institution. After the successful registration. The DLLE Cell organised an Orientation Program to orient them about the DLLE and its mission to bridge the gap between academia and society. The program was conducted by the DLLE Incharge, Asst. Prof. Shaista Shaikh, to introduce the students towards the new DLLE project of 'Skill Development' for the academic year- 2024-2025. Students were given detailed and in-depth information about the various activities that needs to be conducted under the project. They were also explained about the way records need to be maintained of all the activities and events that will take place in future under DLLE. Students were motivated to take active part in the initiatives taken by the college and opportunities provided to them to serve the society and grow their personalities.

Participation in the DLLE Annual Fest

UDAAN FESTIVAL

On 7th February 2025, the college participated in the DLLE Festival held at Shree L.R. Tiwari Degree College of Arts, Commerce and Science; Mira Road. The event was a vibrant platform showcasing the talents and creativity of students across various institutions. A wide range of competitions were organized, including street play, poster making, and the traditional Powada competition, among others. Royal College of Education and Research for Women won the consolation prize in the Street Play Competition. The Street play was themed on the contemporary pressing issue of Mental health and the students stunned everyone in the audience with their powerful and eye-opening performance. The festival fostered a spirit of healthy competition, cultural expression, and community engagement, offering participants an enriching and memorable experience.

Overall Reflection:

The DLLE programme for the academic year 2024–2025 at Royal College of Education and Research for Women has proven to be an enriching and transformative experience. Through the ‘Skill Development’ project, students were provided with opportunities to explore their potential beyond academic boundaries. Activities such as exhibitions, community engagement, and hands-on learning fostered creativity, self-confidence, and a deep understanding of social responsibility. The programme enabled students to bridge the gap between theory and practice, and promoted values such as empathy, cooperation, and leadership. It also encouraged peer learning, critical thinking, and reflective practices, which are essential qualities in a teacher-in-training. Overall, the DLLE initiative played a pivotal role in nurturing socially aware, skillful, and compassionate future educators.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, the DLLE activities carried out during the year effectively fulfilled their objectives by empowering students with essential life skills and a deeper connection to community realities. The programme successfully merged academic learning with practical experiences, ensuring holistic development. The consistent support from the faculty, active participation of the students, and the guidance from the University of Mumbai collectively contributed to the success of the project. As the academic year closes, the learnings and experiences from DLLE will continue to inspire the students in their personal and professional journeys, leaving a lasting impact on their growth as responsible educators and citizens.
