Conducted by: Group of 4 Members

Participants: 11 students

Objectives of the Activity

- To promote teamwork and collaboration among students
- To improve general knowledge related to history and commerce
- To develop quick thinking and decision-making skills
- To enhance communication and confidence among participants
- To make learning interesting through interactive activities

Summary of the event

Royal College of Education and Research for the Women's Social Science club organizes history and commerce club activity on 22th April 2026.

The activity was carefully planned by the four members.

Members prepared the PowerPoint presentation, designed questions for each round, and clearly defined the rules and scoring system. Proper planning helped in conducting the activity smoothly and effectively.

The activity was conducted using a PowerPoint presentation and was divided into three rounds. Students were divided into two groups: Group A and Group B.

Each correct answer was awarded 10 points, and if one team failed to answer within the time limit of 15 seconds the question was pass to the other team and if the other team answered it correctly, they received a bonus of 5 points.

Round 1: Brain Battle

In this round, questions were asked alternately to both groups. Each question included options, and a time limit of 15 seconds was given. Four questions were asked to each group. Both groups performed equally well, resulting in a tie.

Round 2: Voice and Vision

In this round, taglines of the products and slogans by historical famous persons were given, and participants had to identify or complete them. Team A performed better and won this round.

Round 3: Clue in the View

This round involved identifying pictures and answering based on visual clues. It tested observation and knowledge skills. Team B performed better and won this round.

Result

After calculating the total scores of all three rounds, Team A emerged as the overall winner of the activity

Learning Outcomes

- Improved understanding of history and commerce concepts
- Enhanced general knowledge and thinking ability
- Development of teamwork and cooperation
- Better time management and quick response skills

Conclusion:

The club activity was successfully conducted, enhancing students' knowledge, teamwork, and confidence through engaging and interactive rounds, making learning both effective and enjoyable.
